Wyoming PBS to feature a discussion on fracking and drilling

The Wyoming PBS program, Wyoming Chronicle, will feature a discussion about hydraulic fracturing and other aspects of oil and gas drilling. Host Richard Ager speaks with a panel of guests that including Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality Administrator John Corra, Wyoming Oil and Gas Conservation Commission interim supervisor Bob King, Powder River Basin Resource Council organizer Deb Thomas, and WyoFile editor-in-chief Dustin Bleizeffer.

Topics include the Pavillion groundwater contamination investigation, hydraulic fracturing and oversight of oil and gas drilling activities in Wyoming.

The program airs at 7:30 p.m. Friday, and will be live-streamed at Wyoming Chronicle.
